

Yet, despite its ambitious goals, RePowerEU's implementation has encountered significant challenges, creating gaps that Moscow continues to exploit. The new Commission has a ...

The European Commission presents its roadmap for energy independence from Russia. "By 2027, we will be free from Moscow's gas."

Engineers are trained in Russia, control systems are Russian-made, and maintenance contracts tie the client state to Moscow for decades. This vertically integrated model creates ...

The European Commission has therefore presented a roadmap to ensure the EU fully ends its dependency on Russian energy, while ensuring stable energy supplies and prices across ...

The European Union is set to take bold steps to cut its energy dependence on Russia, as Dan Jørgensen, the newly appointed European Commissioner for Energy, announced plans to sever ...

In conclusion, the EU's roadmap to end all Russian energy imports by the end of 2027, marks a significant renewed commitment by the bloc in its energy security and strategic autonomy ...

This decision made on Monday, is a very significant step for Europe as it strives to cut energy ties with Moscow as a result of the ongoing war against Ukraine. The announcement is in line ...

But the Baltic states and their NATO allies must now work to secure this hard-won energy independence from Russia's ongoing hybrid attacks on critical energy infrastructure.

Some may see a potential peace deal as an opportunity to reset energy ties with Moscow, but this would be a historic mistake. The European Union (EU) must double down on its energy ...

The EU's 2027 Russian gas ban is a bold step toward energy independence, breaking Moscow's grip on Europe's energy markets. With a clear timeline, legal ingenuity, and alternative ...

Web: <https://capturedmoments.co.za>